

REAL ESTATE INC.

Check out this $39M East Bay home that just hit the market

May 17, 2016, 11:47am PDT Updated May 17, 2016, 1:53pm PDT

The most expensive home ever listed in the East Bay has just gone up for market, and with a $39 million price tag, you might want to take a look at what comes with that historic price.

The 22-acre estate, dubbed Fieldhaven, is currently owned by Dave Duffield, a creator of PeopleSoft, which was acquired by Oracle (NYSE: ORCL) in 2005 via a hostile takeover for upwards of $8 billion.

The Alamo property has stonework imported from Europe, an aviary, its own woodlands and 20,647 square foot master home completed three years ago by Remick Associates Architects + Master Builders.

It also has a dog spa, two bars, kitchen office, wine cellar, two laundry rooms, fitness center, mail center, billiards room/"teen lounge" and a 14-seat cinema painted by world-renown artists Evans & Brown also of San Francisco. Dana Green of Pacific Union is the listing agent on the property.

Of course, it also includes a vault and a separate 1,404 square-foot one bedroom and one bath carriage house loft (above the car barn), as well as a detached 1,115 square-foot two bedroom/two bath guest house.

The dog spa is appropriate, because all proceeds of the sale will go to a nonprofit pet shelter.

"[Dave] has donated the home to the nonprofit pet shelter, Maddie's Fund, named and founded by him, for his favorite dog who passed away from cancer, with all proceeds of the sale going to that nonprofit," a spokeswoman for the property told the Business Times.

The most expensive home sold in the East Bay to date was sold for \$20.1 million in January.